Character is always and finally the supreme power in human affairs. What is character? It is the stamp of truth, power and proportion made by the hand of God upon mortal clay. Christ alone was the perfect character, stamping that God who is only God, but omnipotent. Southern

SYMPTOMS OF CONSUMPTION.

Now that the value of the open-air treatment of consumption has been demonstrated, the great importance of an early diagnosis of the disease is evident. Unfortunately, it is by no means easy to recognize the disease in its incipency, for the early symptoms are not distinctive, and the cause of the falling health is often not suspected until the disease has become firmly established. The symptoms calling attention especially to disease of the lungs are generally late in appearing, and the physician's suspicions will usually have been aroused long before there is any severe cough or profuse expectoration. At first there is merely a falling off in health; the person is "a little below par," and his friends remark that he is losing flesh. He is not actually ill, and his condition causes him little anxiety, being attributed to a rush of work, or to worryment caused by a business hitch or some family trouble. But as time goes on and the supposed cause of the trouble has been removed, the patient does not recover his strength; on the contrary, the gradual decline continues and a noticeable pallor appears. The lips are bluish, the eyes are abnormally white, the pinkish hue of the nails fade out, the mucous membrane of the mouth is pale—in medical language, the patient is anemic. This pallor is a suspicious sign; an another symptom of marked significance is a rapid pulse, one that beats continuously ninety or one hundred times a minute. At this time there is usually also, more or less fever, although it may be so slight as to be detected only by a frequent use of the thermometer. A fourth symptom of importance is increased perspiration, usually most marked in the first hours after midnight—night sweats—but sometimes troublesome in the daytime as well. Cough during this period is as often absent as present, and in any case is seldom more than a nervous hacking; later it becomes more persistent, and some expectoration appears. But by this time the physician can generally detect signs of lung trouble by an examination of the chest and the discovery of tubercle bacilli when the expectorated matter is studied under the microscope will remove all doubts as to the nature of the malady. Of course one who has persistent anemia, a rapid pulse, night sweats, and perhaps fever, is not necessarily in the early stages of consumption, although there is ground for suspicion. Even if he is, however, there need be no excessive alarm, for the disease at this stage is almost positively curable, and its early detection is therefore a blessing.

Food First.

What would you think of a person who could not take time to eat and sleep? Surely you would tell him that he time given to that which is necessary to life is well spent, even as regards business itself. If health breaks down, what are you to do? And of what avail is all your work if you do not live to reap its fruits? It is just that I would say to you. If you let your soul grow faint and exhausted for want of nourishment, of what avail are all the religious talk or even the fulfillment of urgent and indispensable duties?—Penelon.
